The English Democrats are an officially recognised party campaigning for a Leave vote in the June 23rd EU referendum. For those people who care about England, Leave is the only option that makes any sense at all. England needs English exit (EXIT!!)

3 Reasons to Leave

There are numerous reasons but 3 main reasons are enough to explain why English nationalists want to leave the EU. The 1st reason is the impact of devolution within the UK, the 2nd reason is the impact of immigration and the 3rd reason is the impact of the cost of the EU.

Devolution

Devolution within the UK has created two Assemblies and an extra Parliament. Northern Ireland and Wales now have Assemblies whilst Scotland has its Parliament. England was not given a Parliament under Devolution and remains under the control of the British government. That EU leaning British government has attempted on numerous occasions to break England up into "Regions" that would fit into the EU Regionalist model. Whereas because Wales and Scotland are recognised as EU "Regions" they have been allowed to keep their Nation's natural borders. So their national identity could remain intact within the EU. England on the other hand has had a completely different experience and finds she is looking straight down the barrel of dissolution if she remains in the EU. She knows that she will be balkanised into 9 EU Regions instead of remaining as a one nation "Region" within the EU like the Welsh and Scots. That means England is correct to see the EU as threatening her existence whilst Scotland and Wales do not, hence England is naturally more EU sceptic.

Immigration

Although EU immigrants do settle across the UK it is in England that they mainly settle. Immigration reports show especially high levels of EU settlement in the South East and East of England. So when the now yearly intake of over 300,000 migrants is discussed it is fair to say that England's view will be very different than say Scotland as the Scots are not experiencing the same EU migrant intake. It is easy to be supportive of EU immigration when you are not the country taking most of the migrants! As such Scotland, Wales and Northern Ireland are less concerned but it would be interesting to see the Scottish reaction if the British government stated that they would have to take a higher percentage of EU migrants than England! We saw their anger when Glasgow was made to take Somalian refugees a few years ago.

Payment by country to EU

Payment to the EU is very different across the EU nations which explains why England feels so aggrieved. The average cost per head of population across the UK is £48.00 but when that figure is broken down to the individual nations of the UK it gives a very different picture. The cost of EU membership for England is £140 per head of population whereas Scotland's membership costs them £64.00 per head of population. For Wales the story is again very different because they have subsidies of £164.00 for every man, woman and child in Wales. In Northern Ireland they pay a net £31 per person. Those figures explain why England is more EU sceptic than the other 3 nations. It's because the English pay the most!

So I hope that all those that care for England will join the English Democrats in voting to Leave the EU on the 23rd June. It's a once in a lifetime chance to help save England!

Brexit is Answer to Economic Concerns Check out the Facts!

For many of us who are still undecided on how to vote on 23 June perhaps a brief look at the economic implications for Yorkshire and the Humberside might give readers some key facts to help in their deliberation.

Key Facts

According to HMRC Regional Trade Statistics for 2014-15 the region exported £7.8 billion but actually imported £12 billion from the European Union. This meant that there was a significant trade deficit of £4.2 billion. Our top four European partners were Germany - £1.2 billion, Netherlands £1.25 billion, France £1 billion and Belgium £980 million.

We can compare this then to our export trade to the US of a significant £3.75 billion.

Free Trade or not?

You will often hear that if we voted to leave the EU we would be free to trade with emerging economies and be free from the yoke of a European Trade Bloc that has stalled, but is this supported by the facts?

Brexit benefits UK trade

According to the ONS June 2015, growth in non-EU economies has outpaced growth of EU economies. So, if we compare that to the growth rate of GDP of India of 7.9% (World Bank) to 2020, for example and Australia which has seen its growth of 3.0% GDP year-on-year in the last quarter of 2015 (Australian Bureau of Statistics), it is clear that for our region alone, remaining in the EU does not make economic sense and being open to trade freely with other global markets without the constraints of the EU is the only sensible option.

Sluggish growth

Of significance is the fact that the average quarterly rate growth of GDP within the Eurozone (of 19 Member States) in the second half of last year was a mere of 0.3% GDP. Indeed, in the final quarter of 2015 it was still below its pre-crisis peak of early 2008 whereas America's was almost 10% above its peak of late 2007.

The forecast remains just as sluggish and uncertain with the sharp fall in European equity markets and with the Chinese economy experiencing its own slowdown with a forecast of a 4.5% GDP, down from 9.5% GDP in 2010 (UIE). As China is Germany's fourth largest export market there are deep concerns over the impact this slowdown is having on the German economy and the knock-on effect within the Eurozone.

Therese Hirst

"The Remain campaign has tried to terrify voters about the risks of leaving.

But the perils of staying are greater, because the EU will not stand still. They are already planning for ways to sideline the UK."

How Many Laws Are Made By the EU?

This is a question that is at the centre of the EU debate - and, depending which side you ask, you can get an answer ranging from five to 75 per cent.

The variation is down to the fact that it depends what you count as "UK laws". EU directives and regulations are two very different things, and yet both can influence our day to day lives.

On the proportion of Britain's laws coming from the EU, we have the following estimates:

Without counting EU regulations 13%

Counting EU regulations 65%

Figures are for 1993-2014; House of Commons worked out the first figure, while Business for Britain gave the second

The House of Commons library has said that it's possible to justify any figure between 15 and 55 per cent. So there you go: everyone's right.

Editorial

There is no status quo

The point about next Thursday's referendum is the options are not Leave or the status quo; they are Leave or be drawn further into the next stages of the EU project currently being decided in the capitals of Europe, whatever their voters might want, because they are not being consulted. We know this because the proposals are set out in the so-called Five Presidents Report.

Eurozone Reinforced

These measures are intended to underpin the Eurozone, of which we are not a part; but the treaties required to bring them about will turn the EU increasingly into the single political entity we have always opposed.

The Real Issue

For me, this referendum is not about immigration or money transfers but that age-old democratic question: who governs? This makes me think of nationhood and the future for England.

Outcome? What Next?

Whatever the outcome the fight for our identity as English, must continue. If we Leave the EU we will still have a battle to gain our own 'voice' within the UK. We need to continue to fight for our own Parliament and our own Independence.

Please consider getting involved in getting involved in putting up posters to promote Home Rule.

Veritas, the EU Referendum and Beyond

Veritas, the presumptively named UK political party founded by Robert Kilroy-Silk and myself in early 2005; to specifically fight the 2005, General Election failed in its attempt to bring the truth back to Britain's politics.

Slogans adopted by others

The adoption by our main opponents of slogans that are cringe inducing, especially today: "Are you thinking, what we are thinking," by Howard's Tories and by 2007 Brown's, "British Jobs for British Workers," from the immigration facilitating Labour Party, demonstrated our impact, albeit purely for campaigning, rather than policy-forming purposes.

No monopoly on truth

Veritas as a party name was not chosen to imply a monopoly on truth, nor indeed any particular access to it. The TRUTH was absent in UK politics in 2005, as it largely remains today. Rather it was the thing we sought, whether on the EU in general, shrouded in secrecy as ever, or its particular disastrous by-products such as large scale and often clandestine immigration.

Alarms raised but not heeded

Facts only now being revealed show how correct we were to try to raise the alarm over the then ongoing levels of immigration. The fact we were not listened to, denigrated and ignored, is not now immaterial.

We warned, too, of the dangers of the EU even then clearly bent on removing democracy across Europe.

Future for England post referendum

The English Democrats shared this latter grave concern; which is why the largely symbolic coming together of the two Parties, is in my mind so significant. If the presently ongoing EU referendum campaign results in England becoming locked within the non-democratic EU as a result of votes cast elsewhere within the United Kingdom, the English Democrats will likely offer our main hope to restore democracy. Learning and revealing the truth of events leading up to and beyond the European Communities Act of 1972, will become key.

The '500' Club

At the time of going to press we still do not have 21 shares so we will not start this 'Club' until we reach this number. We did have some people who attended the Spring Conference who took forms away to complete which would have taken us up to the required number of shares.

Action required

If you still have a form and have forgotten to send it back please do so as soon as possible.

If you would like to take part then download the forms and get involved. http://hertsengdem.org/?page_id=8988

Fundraise to Win

Fundraising for the local party is well established as part of party activities. National party funds have traditionally come from memberships subscriptions and donations from individual members. Donations have declined to dangerously low levels.

You are also aware that if we are to be the fighting force that we need to be we need to be able to fund our various activities.

Funding Campaigns

The recent PCC elections saw some success with 2 candidates retaining their deposits. Winning would be nice but an effort to upset the political establishment is much more fruitful.

Join Now

We have been running an Easyfundraising site for some time. Many local Branches also operate a fundraising page to raise money for local branches.

An example of the funds that you can raise is a recent order of printer inks raised £4.50.

If you have not signed up and downloaded the app to allow your donations to be given to the Party do so today! Just sign up at : <http://www.easyfundraising.org.uk>

Nationalism and the EU

All the nationalist parties, SNP, Plaid Cymru and Sinn Féin, are Socialist. The nationalist party for England is the English Democrats. Because we are not a Socialist Party we are labelled (incorrectly) as right wing.

England balkanised by EU

The other nationalist parties have retained their national identity and have parliaments. The English do not and will not have a national voice if we remain in the EU.

The EU is determined to continue to balkanise England into nine regions with the objective, in my opinion, of destroying England.

Hatred of British Establishment

However all the nationalist parties have one common enemy and that is the British Establishment.

England 'pays' the Barnett formula within the UK costing English taxpayers £49 Billion a year. England pays the EU membership fees of £20 Billion a year.

England pays the price

England continues to lose out to fraud; at least £160 Billion was lost to one type of VAT fraud called Missing Trader Inter Community, most of the money was sent via Europe to Dubai.

Give us an English Parliament

However in return we have 'no say', "No English Voice" are being politically attacked from all sides. This will only be resolved with an English Parliament.

Brexit Aftermath-What Happens Next?

A vote for Brexit is not what will determine whether the UK leaves the EU. This depends on the political decisions which then follow before the Article 50 notification.

Cameron government wants to Remain

The policy of the Cameron government is to remain in the EU. They may decide to put off filing the Article 50 notification. They may already have plans to slow things down and to put off any substantive decision until after the summer.

Brexit is not the end but the beginning

A Brexit vote is not the end of things but is just the start of a process that needs to take place as quickly as possible.

UK still a member of the EU post Brexit

The day after a vote for Brexit, the UK will still be a member state of the EU. All legislation which gives effect to EU law will still be in place. Despite what Remainers have said nothing as a matter of law changes in any way just because of a vote to Leave.

Brexit non-binding only Article 50 binds

What will make the difference amazingly is not a decision to leave by UK voters in a non-binding advisory vote, but the decision of the prime minister on making any Article 50 notification.

Voters must keep the pressure on Cameron

We must put pressure on the Government to file Article 50 as soon as possible. We must make sure that the Government does not punish the people who voted against their wishes by not securing a favourable deal.

English Democracy

We must make sure that an English Parliament and English Independence are top of the agenda.

Activity After EU Referendum Home Rule for England

I am looking to organise getting large numbers of Home Rule posters up wherever we can across England in the immediate aftermath of the EU election to get people thinking about the next big issue - England's future!

Will you please therefore circulate this to anyone that you know who you think might be interested in helping and please also let me know if you would be and how many posters you think you would be able to get displayed?

Each poster will take no more than 10 minutes to position and full guidance of how and where to do it will be given.

10 Bombshells the EU's keeping secret until after you've voted

Embarrassing leaks have revealed that British Government officials colluded to keep contentious issues about plans for making the EU more of a superstate off the political agenda until after the referendum.

Most shocking of these secret proposals involves allowing 1.5 million Turks visa-free access to Britain.

But here are ten more controversial policies EU leaders are planning - by stealth- if we vote to Remain

1. Banning hair-dryers

EU plans to outlaw high-energy dishwashers, hairdryers and other household appliances. It will help Germans keep competitors out of the market.

2. A bigger budget

A mid term review of the EU's seven year budget was due at the start of the year. Its been postponed till after the referendum. Why? Unpaid bills amount to 24.7 Billion Euros. Britain pays 12.5% so our share is an additional £2.4 billion. This is before we start to pay money being demanded by MEP's to deal with migration crisis.

3. Open Borders

If we vote to Remain on unchanged terms (which DC failed to get) we are accepting in perpetuity that there can be no controls over migrant flows. We agreed to open borders with EU not open to the world!

4. More Bail-outs

It is quite clear that this promise is ditched as soon as it is inconvenient and Britain is powerless to stop it. If and when Euro crisis spreads to Italy and France (and many say it will within next 3 years), the crisis will be so huge that Germany and Britain would have to help out.

5 Deeper Integration

The EU responds to the euro and migration crisis by giving more power to Brussels. This is done as single market measures (only mechanism available) and Britain will be dragged in regardless of any promises previously made.

6 Human Rights

Europe will settle all issues regarding deportation of terrorists etc. British courts are powerless.

7 Arts Imports Licences

London is already disadvantaged in its global position by EU imposition of VAT to fine arts sales and also by Resale Rights rule. EU plans to import licensing regime meaning more cost etc. than overseas rivals

8 Wrecking our Ports

EU will oblige every port to have more than one provider for its internal services. This makes sense in Europe but not in Britain where ports are private, small and in competition with each other. Every British MEP voted against this but it went through anyway, but the final decision was suddenly deferred.

9.Quotas for online TV

EU wants online providers to reserve 20 % of their content to European programmes and given 'good' visibility.

10.A European Army

'No-one is talking about a European Army' say Remainers. No-one except people running the EU. It is called a 'strategic necessity'.
